

69% of healthcare IT leaders plan to grow their email security budget

Email security spending is heading up. The question is whether it buys less friction or more.

What we found

69% of healthcare IT leaders plan to increase their email security budget in the next 12 months.

The money is coming. Leaders who spend it on more add-on tools risk more friction and more sprawl. The better return is consolidation that removes work, not adds it.

What it means for buyers

Current tools disappoint

60% admit their email security measures are inadequate.

Overhauls are on the table

72% say their email security infrastructure needs a major overhaul.

More tools mean more friction

86% say existing tools already create daily friction.
